

Where in lies the truth?

Australian History, science and anthropology seem to be in big trouble. It would appear that Australian scientists are inept. Particularly those dealing with time dating of archaeological and palaeontologic significance. Amongst recent radio highlights was the debate of exactly how long Australian Aborigines have been in Australia. Two figures are now touted against each other. One-group claims Aborigines have been in Australia for 60,000 years, the other say 40,000. These two groups can't even agree on when the mega Fauna became extinct. When Mongo man was first discovered in the 70's, It was a revolutionary find proving that today's aboriginal was not Australia's first human inhabitant. In fact there is believed to be at least two totally separate people here before the advent of today's aborigine. Neither has aboriginal DNA. Well, what are 20 to 40 thousand years between friends? I myself believe that this problem of dating has more to do with the application of political correctness, than the application of sound science, where the truth is sacrificed in place of a fabrication of that which, is said to be the truth.

This is of course the sound foundation of global warming Pty Ltd, where man has doomed the planet to drown when the polar caps melt at a whole degree less that what the temperature was over a thousand years ago when the Vikings settled Greenland. For those who are lost when it comes to science I shall explain what the Greenhouse hoaxer's leave out.

- 1) The Arctic glaciers are melting because there is volcanism active in that area. It is NOT due to global warming. In fact, to use the figures for Antarctica, there is about 2.5 Billion tonnes of new ice formed there, every single day!
- 2) The Greenhouse affect, the name given to the atmospheric gasses that retain heat at night, that was captured through the day and therefore prevents sub zero temperatures. Greenhouse does not generate heat.
- 3) NASA Satellites sent up to study global warming have found that the raising temperature is being generated from within the planet. This is also contradictory to the hoaxers who still cry its all man's fault.
- 4) Trees and plants produce more greenhouse gas emission than we do.
- 5) Plankton in the world's oceans produces more oxygen than every tree and plant combined on land.
- 6) Water expands when frozen to ice. So get a glass, fill it with ice and then fill it to the top with water. When all the ice has melted you will find that every drop of water is still in the glass and the level may have in fact dropped from the top. So wake up boys and girls, the truth is far more of a concern than the bucket of lies that you're swallowing.
- 7) The holes in the ozone layer directly above the poles are caused by the interaction of charged particles blasted at us by our sun of which are channelled to the polar regions by our magnetosphere or if you like van Allen belt. The interaction destroys ozone gas. However the planets electrical storms (of which thousands of electrical discharges occur every hour) replenish this gas. The whole phenomenon is cyclic, natural and has been in place long before man ever set foot upon the ground. Meanwhile, we in One Nation shall approach the real environmental problems, such as toxicity, disease and viruses that current governments can't seem to comprehend.

The Global Warming Hoax

Prominent scientist, who have proven that man-made global warming to be a hoax,

- 1) Professor Tim Ball, Dept of Climatology, University of Winnipeg
- 2) Professor Nir Shaviv, Institute of Physics, University of Jerusalem
- 3) Dr Piers Cobbyn, Climate Forecaster, Weather Action
- 4) Professor Paul Reiter, IPCC and Dept of Medical Entomology Pasteur Institute, Paris
- 5) Professor John Christy, lead Author, IPCC
- 6) Professor Philip Stott, Dept of Biogeography, University of London
- 7) Professor Richard Lindzen, IPCC and M .I. T.
- 8) Dr Roy Spencer, Weather Satellite Team Leader NASA
- 9) Professor Patric Michaels, Dept of Environmental Sciences, University of Virginia
- 10) Professor Frederick Singer, Former Director U.S. National Weather Service
- 11) Professor Syun-Ichi Akasofu, Director, international Arctic Research Centre
- 12) Professor Ian Clark, Dept of Earth sciences, University of Ottawa
- 13) Professor Eigil Friis-Christensen, Director Danish National Space Centre
- 14) Nigel Calder, Former Editor, New Scientist, England
- 15) Paul Driessen, Author, "Green Power, Black Death"
- 16) Patrick Moore, Co-Founder of Green Peace
- 17) James Shikuati, Economist and Author

Ok, so the last three are not scientists, so why have I listed them. Starting with James, He is a native African concerned for the plight of his people. The U.N. Green groups and Western governments are preventing Africa from accessing their immense deposits of coal and oil because of the global warming fraud. His people instead are told they have to invest in solar and wind to generate their electrical needs. In effect this is disastrous, as both forms are notoriously unreliable and ineffective. An example made by James was a medical centre of which has lighting and a fridge, one or the other can be used, but not both at the same time or the power fails. Thus Africa's development has been hamstrung. For all the talk of the U.N. It is they whom are largely responsible for the continuation of poverty, illness, disease and stagnation of development of most of the African continent. In a nut shell, they do not want these people to progress.

Paul. A green activist turned renegade out of disgust of the green policies that have so detrimentally affected third world countries such as so many of the African nations. What the green movement has become is anti development and a throw back to the medieval days. Today the green movement is the most instrumental in stifling development across the world and collaborators of such draconian measures as for example impinged upon the Australian farmer and society.

Patric, one of the most renowned and respected environmentalists of his era, left the Green Peace movement after it was besieged by neo Marxists after the collapse of communism. Today he has no inhibition about describing Green peace as being anti human.

But I hear you say, the U.N. has a list of 2,500 of the world's top scientist on their IPCC (Inter Governmental Panel on Climate Change) whom support the man-made global warming theory. Well, that is an out right deception, in fact, most of them are not even scientists and few of them were asked for their consent to have their names added. In fact, leading scientists who were on the panel left in disgust and to use Professor Paul Reiter, number 4 on the list above, as an example, had to resort to threatening to take legal action against the U.N. just to have his name removed.

The fact of the matter is that every geological record, every ice core sample proves that CO₂ is a result of rising global temperature not a cause and lags behind warming by at least several hundred years. These samples prove that the earth in its relatively not so long ago past has been much hotter than it is today, and carbon levels have been as much as ten times higher than that of today. The world's oceans did not engulf the continents and creatures such as the polar bear and penguin obviously survived. Even the Corral reefs survived and in fact flourished.

Scientist were amazed to observe that our star's magnetic fields more than doubled in intensity during the 20th century, so why is it so hard for so many to believe that it is our local star, the sun, of which governs our weather and terrestrial temperature, especially if one can contemplate and accept that our moon affects the tides of the ocean. Rising sea levels have more to do with the ascending and descending of land mass than actual rising of sea level, even the oscillating tilt in the earths axis goes further to explain any changes in sea level. Actual global rise in sea level is a result of thermal expansion of the world's oceans and because of their vastness takes thousands of years to occur.

From the 1940's to the mid 70's scientist were concerned after 30 years of falling temperature, that we were headed for another ice age. When one considers that this period hosted the post war economic boom, when mankind was producing its highest levels of Co₂, then should not have global temperature have increased during this period? Paradoxically, it was not until the world recession of the 70's that temperature started to again rise. So the Green's are hell bent on telling you the man kind is responsible for global warming because of the amount of CO₂ we produce, so lets see were we fit in the big scheme of things.

Man kind produces about 6.5 gig tons of CO₂

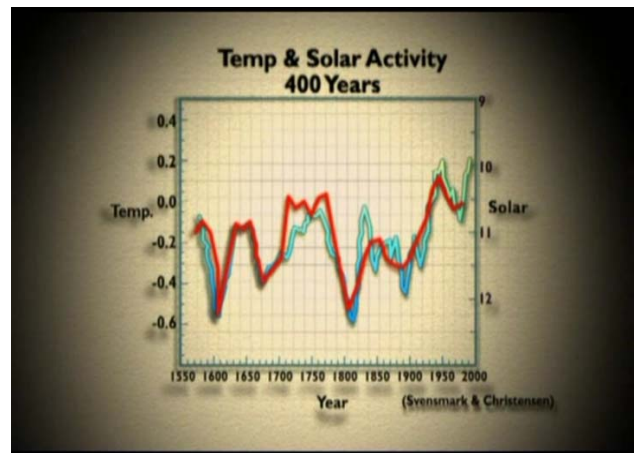

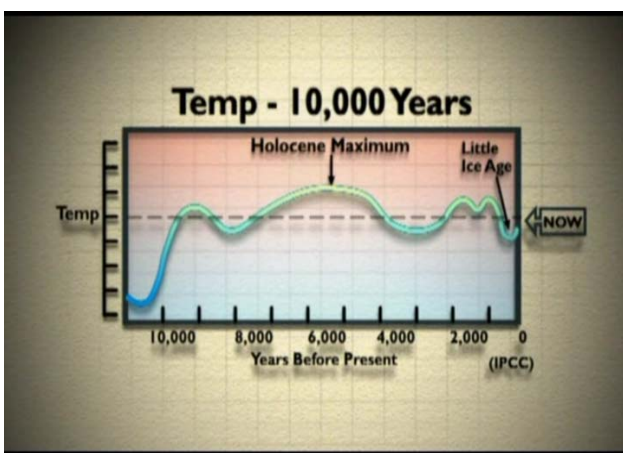

Volcanoes currently produce substantially more CO₂ than all of man kind's contribution put together.

Animals and bacteria produce 150 gig tons of CO₂

Vegetation produces more still.

But the world's oceans produce by far the most CO₂ than any of the aforementioned.

World temperature is as simple as comparing our sun to an air conditioner. When our star is in its Solar Maximum phase, it gets hotter, and consequently, when our sun is in its solar minimum phase, it gets cooler. Man made global warming is just bad science. For Science is the search for the truth and fact regardless of wether your theory is right or wrong, the excitement comes from finding the truth. The Green movement does not accept this fact. The truth of the matter is that the Earths temperature is dynamic and is always changing and we are not responsible.

Andrew Webber FEDERAL POLICY CO-ORDINATOR
ONE NATION NSW

'Lost' WWII fighter squadron may fly again after 60 years

FOR more than 60 years they've lain silent under deepening snow in Greenland.

But now a squadron of fighter planes – ditched during an aborted mission in World War II – could fly again under an audacious plan proposed in Europe.

A multinational recovery team hopes to use steam and a special wedge to burrow 100 metres through ice and snow to recover five Lockheed P-38 Lightning aircraft, believed to be in well-preserved condition.

The planes would then be restored and could fetch up to $13.5 million apiece.

Mission leader Dieter Herrmann said the project was scheduled to get under way in 2007 and he would welcome Australian involvement.

"Until today neither Australians nor Australian companies are involved in the recovery mission," he told Discovery. "Let's change that."

"We just had a brief chat with an Australian airline operating wheel/ski planes and possibly willing to work with us in Greenland."

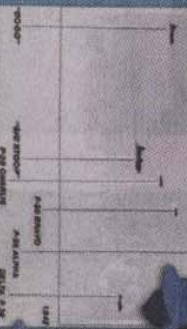

The "lost squadron", as the planes have been dubbed, were part of Operation Bolero, an initiative to transport planes made in the United States to Europe to help in the war effort.

On July 7, 1942, two B-17 Flying Fortresses and six P-38s set out from Maine for England, flying over Newfoundland, Greenland and Iceland.

The pilots feared bad weather and after losing their way during a change of course, they were forced to land

GHOSTS FROM THE WAR

Aerial photograph of the lost squadron taken in 1942

1942: Two B-17 Flying Fortresses accompanied by six Lockheed P-38 Lightning fighters make emergency landing in Greenland on way to Germany.

their craft on an stretch of ice in Greenland's east.

No one was injured and the crews were rescued days later by a US Coast Guard ship.

The craft were left on the ice and were slowly buried beneath ever-deepening layers of snow.

However, they were not forgotten by aviation enthusiasts and from 1977 various groups made 12 attempts to retrieve the planes.

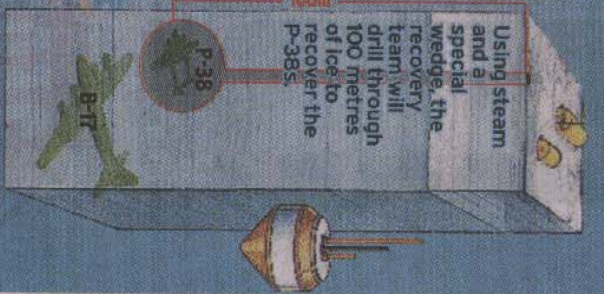

All were unsuccessful until 1992 when a team headed by American 1992: One P-38 Lightning recovered from the snow and ice.

2002: The recovered P-38 nicknamed Glacier Girl takes to the sky again.

2006: Preparation under way for major attempt to recover the rest of the squadron of P-38s.

J Roy Shoffner managed to recover one P-38 from 80 metres below the surface.

The craft was restored, dubbed Glacier Girl, and featured in the Hollywood film The Aviator.

Herrmann's team hope to recover the remaining five planes using steam to tunnel down to the aircraft.

Their first challenge, however, will be to accurately determine the location of the planes.

They will then use a steam-heated metal wedge, resembling an upside down dog kennel, to melt its way through the accumulated snow and ice.

The planes will be removed at an estimated cost of about $4 million.

The team believe the P-38s will be in a condition good enough to restore.

However, the bombers, which had no heavy armour, are feared crushed.

The current market value for an unrestored aircraft is about $2.7 million and about $13.5 million for a restored, airworthy plane.

The expedition will set off from Hamburg early next year.

Add seven more years to your life

PEOPLE living today could have their lives extended by up to seven years, researchers into ageing say.

In a paper published in the journal The Scientist, a research team including Professor Jay Oshansky from the University of Illinois said interventions such as manipulating genes, altering reproduction and reducing calories could help extend human life spans.

The group has called on governments to fund ageing research as a way of improving community wellbeing and reducing strains on world health systems.

Oshansky, a professor of epidemiology and biostatistics, and his colleagues said science's understanding of ageing processes had advanced greatly in recent years.

"The belief that ageing is an immutable process, programmed by evolution, is now known to be wrong," they wrote.

The group said a seven-year extension of life was an achievable target for many people who were alive today.